

Pailyn Singhapakdi is a civic leader whose work weaves together historic preservation, global engagement, and public service.

She is the President of Preserve St. Peter's, a nonprofit dedicated to stewarding one of Philadelphia's most historically significant landmarks. She has also been nominated to serve on the Board of Governors of the Cosmopolitan Club, a private women's club founded in 1928, and is the Communications Chair for the Center for Courageous Women of Faith, which honors the pioneering legacy of the Philadelphia Eleven and Bishop Barbara Harris—the first women ordained as priests and bishop in the Episcopal Church.

Pailyn's work is driven by a deep commitment to elevating Philadelphia's legacy on the world stage. Through her leadership, she advances initiatives that honor the city's rich heritage while fostering thoughtful, globally minded dialogue.

A lifelong enthusiast of classic literature from around the world, she believes in its power to build cross-cultural understanding and connection. She's proud to be named a Young Professional Co-Chair for this year's World Heritage City Celebration, helping champion Philadelphia's role as a global cultural capital.

Pailyn is a 2016 graduate of Bryn Mawr College and works as a recruiter in Center City Philadelphia.
