

Rishaun Hall

Rishaun Hall graduated from Cristo Rey Philadelphia High School in 2016 which he was a member of the founding graduating class. A native of West Philadelphia, Rishaun Hall has been serving the Philadelphia area since he was 14. While at Cristo Rey Philadelphia High School, Hall interned at the Mayor's Office of Philadelphia, and this is where he found his passion. Hall's calling has always been to serve his community. During his time at the Mayor's Office, Hall served as chair of the Philadelphia Youth Commission, was a Youth Delegate in the 2015 National League of Cities, and a former east coast organizer for Generation Progress.

Rishaun's dedication to the mission has never wavered. Currently, Hall is the President of Young Involved Philadelphia. A nonprofit focused on civic engagement for young professionals in Philadelphia. Hall is the founding Chair of the Workforce Development Committee for the Cristo Rey Network National Leadership Council, where he is led the discussion around productivity and professionalism in the workplace. Fueled by workforce development with a focus on the young professional pipeline, Hall was also a contributor to a feasibility study focused on opening a new Cristo Rey High School in Charleston, South Carolina.

Hall also founded the Shyheem Robinson Legacy Scholarship in honor of his fallen friend/fellow Cristo Rey alum who was tragically murdered in October 2020. Due to his efforts, the scholarship has now raised over $15,000 in the name of his friend. Donate to the Shyheem Robinson Legacy Scholarship.

Hall holds a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from Wheeling Jesuit University (now Wheeling University) and a master's degree in public administration from West Chester University.

Rishaun is a senior associate for the Pew Charitable Trusts Philadelphia Research and Policy Initiative, where his main roles include serving as a connector bridge between Pew and Philadelphia City Council while supporting PRPI's government effectiveness and economic mobility portfolios.
