World Youth Chamber Orchestra in Italian and American sounds
A Concert with Music by G. Verdi and S. Barber

On the occasion of
2013 Year of Italian Culture in the U.S.

The Consulate General of Italy in Philadelphia, the Boyer College of Music and Dance, and the Italian program - FGIS Department at Temple University present

November 16, 2013 at 7:00 p.m.
Rock Hall Auditorium
1715 North Broad Street - Philadelphia, PA 19106
The World Youth Chamber Orchestra is dedicated to the younger generations of Italian and American musicians, and to the great musical tradition of the two countries. The Foundation, which has been for years an incubator for young talented people from Italy and all around the world, aims to build partnerships and networks capable of generating and sustaining durable exchanges and cooperations. This project, supported by the Italian Embassy and the Italian Cultural Institute in Washington, DC is part of the “Year of Italian Culture in the USA”.

The American Composer: Samuel Barber

Native of West Chester, PA, at age 14 Samuel Barber entered the Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia. He began composing seriously in his late teenage years. Around the same time, he met fellow Curtis schoolmate Gian Carlo Menotti, who became his partner in life as well as in their shared profession. At the Curtis Institute, Barber was a triple prodigy in composition, voice, and piano. He died of cancer in 1981 in New York City at the age of 70. He is buried in Oaklands Cemetery in West Chester, PA.

He began his String Quartet in B minor, Op. 11 while living in Austria with his partner after winning the Prix de Rome. He intended that the quartet be premiered by the Curtis String Quartet, but did not finish the piece in time for their concert tour. On Sep. 19, 1936 Barber wrote their cellist Orlando Cole: “I have just finished the slow movement of my quartet today - it is a knockout! Now for a Finale.” Having completed a finale, the string quartet was premiered in its provisional form by the Pro Arte Quartet on December 14, 1936 at the Villa Aurelia in Rome. Afterward Barber withdrew the finale so as to rewrite it, which he did by April, 1937. He rewrote it again before it was published.

The opening movement is in sonata form, the second movement the famous adagio, and the final version of the finale, added to the second movement attacca, is shortened, lasting two-minutes, and revisits themes from the opening movement, thereby creating a cyclic form for the quartet.

When Barber was 28, his Adagio for Strings (arranged from the slow movement of String Quartet Op. 11) was performed by the NBC Symphony Orchestra conducted by A. Toscanini, along with his first Essay for Orchestra. Toscanini had only rarely performed music by American composers before, but was impressed by this work “semplice e bello” (simple and beautiful), as he said after the first rehearsal.

This concert is a tribute to American composer Samuel Barber, a Pennsylvanian whose talent was discovered and developed in this very city of Philadelphia.
Giuseppe Verdi’s production of Aida in early March, 1873 was delayed due to the sudden illness of soprano Teresa Stolz. Verdi focused his time in Naples on the writing of his first chamber work, String Quartet in E minor. The work was premiered two days after the opening of Aida during an informal recital at his hotel on April 1, 1873. Verdi commented on the work, saying: “I’ve written a Quartet in my leisure moments in Naples. I had it performed one evening in my house, without attaching the least importance to it and without inviting anyone in particular. Only the seven or eight persons who usually come to visit me were present. I don’t know whether the Quartet is beautiful or ugly, but I do know that it’s a Quartet!” Despite Verdi’s humble words, his String Quartet in E minor is valued among the great classical chamber works of the 19th century. Tonight WYCO will perform the version for string orchestra.

Ave Maria for soprano and orchestra is one of Verdi’s most obscure mature works, from 1880. Verdi thought that this vernacular rendering of the prayer was by Dante; in fact, it is now believed to be by Antonio de’ Beccari, a Ferrarese from the early fourteenth century. In any event, one of Verdi’s motivations in creating this “Ave Maria” was, in a broad sense, political. He wished to highlight Italian traditions (of poetry, of vocal music) in contrast to the foreign works then in fashion in Italy. (Does Italy ever change? Sigh…) Verdi wrote to colleagues in 1879: “It is right to educate the public to, as the cognoscenti say, high art, but it seems to me that the art of Palestrina and Marcello may also be high art… and it is ours.”

This concert is a tribute to Italian composer Giuseppe Verdi in the 200th Anniversary of his Birth (1813-1901),
Since September 15, 2001, when he founded the World Youth Orchestra and then the World Youth Chamber Orchestra, Damiano Giuranna has been engaged in a new idea of performing music, combining art and social commitment. Damiano Giuranna has taken the WYO and the WYCO on tours in Italy, Germany, Malta, Estonia, Ireland and the United States, Accademia Nazionale di S. Cecilia, Auditorium Parco della Musica, Berlin Konzerthaus, Manoel Theatre, Estonian National Opera, Limerik University Hall, and in many other places, where the WYCO was always appreciated by the audience and critics alike. In June 2005, Damiano Giuranna directed the WYO, in a special concert held at the United Nations in New York in the General Assembly Hall. The concert was performed at the invitation of UNICEF’s International Board and by the Italian Mission to the United Nations. Over the course of eight years, the two companies have involved more than 1,200 young talents from the five continents. Prestigious tutors from important musical institutions such as the Orchestra of the Scala in Milan, the Berlin Philharmonic, the Orchestra of Maggio Musicale Fiorentino, the Juilliard School of Music, the Mozarteum of Salzburg, the Royal Academy of Music of London, and the Orchestra of the Academy of S. Cecilia; Supporting this concert were representatives from the most prestigious international institutions such as the United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan, the President of the European Commission, the Council of Europe Secretary General and many others. Thanks to its social commitment, the WYO was nominated UNICEF Goodwill Ambassador in 2002.
